

Conversation Questions

1. Describe a time where you were “painted in a corner” | “your back was against the wall” and what happened. Would you do anything differently?
2. What is the hardest decision that you’ve ever made, but it was indeed the right one?
3. How well do you think outside the box when faced with a “painted in a corner” problem or challenging situation? Why do you think that is?
4. Is there a calculated sacrificial risk you need to currently take? Is there a harder choice that you likely need to choose in the midst of it?
